DISBROW TRIES TO HIT PROSECUTOR.

Prisoner Held for Murder of "Dimple" Lawrence and Clarence Foster—Frenzied, He Attempts to Strangle the District-Attorney—Cheers in Court—Room for Justice's Decision.

GOOD GROUND, July 9.—At the conclusion of a tumultuous summing up, in the course of which Louis Disbrow attempted to assault and strangle District-Attorney Smith in the courtroom, Disbrow this afternoon was held for the Grand Jury on the charge of murdering Clarence Foster and "Dimple" Lawrence.

The decision of the court was greeted with cheers by the crowd. Disbrow, all aquiver with anger and disappointment, was led away to jail.

The outbreak of the young man was extremely sensational, and in view of the contention of the District-Attorney that in a fit of jealous anger Disbrow strangled "Dimple" Lawrence to death it was significant.

The striking feature of the attempted assault was the disposition of the prisoner to get at Mr. Smith's throat.

Strikingly and eloquently Mr. Smith reviewed his evidence. Step by step he traced the movements of the trio on the fatal night. As point after point was made clear the face of the accused young man became livid. The light of fear was in his eyes.

Suddenly Mr. Smith turned to the prisoner. Stretching his arm across the table he cried:

"When you said you left Miss Lawrence at the Ternell House you lied. You lied, and you know you lied."

Disbrow was out of his chair with a bound. With outstretched arms and straining fingers he made a spring for the throat of the District-Attorney. A shout of dismay went up from the crowd. Some of the women turned to run from the room.

Lawyer Miles was so quick in getting to Disbrow and pulling him back that the young man had no chance to get at Mr. Smith, who stood his ground with a smile of triumph on his face.

"Don't attempt to get at me," he said, "don't lay your hands on me. Your action is most suggestive for a man in your position."

Weak and trembling Disbrow allowed himself to be forced to his chair, and Mr. Smith went on with his presentation of the evidence.

STATE'S WITNESSES CORROBORATED.

GOOD GROUND, July 9.—After calling a number of witnesses to corroborate evidence already adduced against the prisoner, the prosecution in the case of Louis A. Disbrow, accused of murdering Clarence Foster and Sarah "Dimple" Lawrence, rested its case at 12.15 this afternoon.

The court room was crowded as on previous days of the hearing. Mrs. Clarence Foster, widow of the dead man, and Mrs. Foster, sr., his mother, were present. Nearly half the crowd that filled Union Hall consisted of women.

Alfonso Hahn was the first witness to-day. He had examined Foster's body and corroborated former testimony that there was a cut on the forehead.

James Cassidy swore in a like manner, contradicting Coroner Nugent's positive statement that Foster's head bore no wound.

H. C. Mott, an oysterman, who owns a boat on Bay, was called by Mr. Smith to show that his boat was not used on the night of June 9. On cross-examination Mr. Miles tried to show that the bay was full of broken stakes and buoys, marking out oyster beds.

There are such stakes in the bay," said Mott.

"But were any within 250 yards of the shore or near Ternell's?" asked Mr. Smith. "I don't know of any beds in a half mile from that point," said Mott. Mr. Miles did not press the point.

In support of "Will" Walton's story, John Brewster, a liverman, of Quogue, told of Disbrow and Walton hiring a team from him, to drive to Eastport, as Walton had told. He would not positively identify Disbrow, which caused the prisoner to smile broadly.

Heard Stevens, a gardener on the Leighton estate, on Tiana Bay, testified that he heard one or two teams pass near his home late at night on June 9, waking him up.

"They were on the road leading to Ternell's," he said. "I think they got off the road on the lawn and among the trees. One seemed to be abusing the other in the rig."

Disbrow was in high spirits. He appeared to be highly amused at the testimony of Theodore Carter and Roger Squires were the next witnesses.

As Squires was leaving the stand he caused a flurry. He swore positively that the string on the oarlocks of the heavy dingy was not the same string as the one that tied them when the boat was found.

Lawyer Miles seized eagerly upon this. The witness said: "I rowed the dingy from where it was found to my brother Nelson's place. When the Croker and Jacobs boys brought down the locks the string was wound around them. I took hold of the ends sticking out and the locks dropped. The string was three feet or four feet long and was cut in two."

Brooklyn Victim of Mysterious Stranger's Bullet in Serious Condition—Wife Hastily Called to the Hospital—Dr. Morrison, Who Is Sure a Burglar Shot Him, Explains That His Patient Is in No Condition to Give a Statement.

Albert G. Latimer is dying from the wound he received mysteriously in his home in Brooklyn a week ago.

A bulletin issued at St. Mary's Hospital said he was not likely to live through the day. Mrs. Latimer and the dying man's sister have been hurriedly called to his bedside.

Mr. Latimer is dying without having thrown an real light upon the shooting.

His brother, G. Byron Latimer, says he is in too critical a condition to talk.

Heretofore it has been said that no one was seen running near the Latimer house after the shooting.

Evening World reporters have found persons who saw a man running and escape through an unfinished house in the rear immediately after the alarm was given.

Dr. Robert J. Morrison in a statement to The Evening World declares he believes a burglar did the shooting and explains why he has kept the police from the bedside of his patient.

WE SHIELD NO ONE, SAYS DYING MAN'S BROTHER.

G. Byron Latimer gave out a statement at noon, just after he had hurriedly called Mrs. Latimer and his sister to the bedside of his dying brother.

"My brother is in a very critical condition," said G. Byron Latimer. "He has had no sleep since yesterday afternoon, although he has had enough opiate to put fifteen men to sleep. It is a question now of sleep or death, and sleep has very little chance. My brother is in desperate shape. I have just sent for his wife and sister."

"I WISH TO SAY NOW THAT MY BROTHER NEVER SAID THAT HE WAS SHOT BY A BURGLAR, OR THAT HE WAS SHOT LYING IN HIS BED. This is absolutely true. We are most anxious to catch the man who shot him, no matter who he is, and there is NO EFFORT TO CONCEAL ANYTHING OR TO SHIELD ANY ONE. We have nothing to conceal and no one to shield."

"The only reason his wife was not allowed to be with him alone was that in her hysterical state we were afraid she would make a scene and start my brother's heart to beating more rapidly, thus bringing on a hemorrhage, which would be fatal."

"I asked him in one of his lucid moments to tell us how he was shot, and he threw up both hands, intimating that he did not know—that the memory of the event had passed from his mind."

Delirious When He Wrote.

"He did write something on the paper relative to leaving all to his children, but he was in a highly delirious state at the time. He has not talked much about the shooting. He talks in his delirium about his business, which he worries about before."

RACE TRACK, MONTAUK BEACH, July 9.—The Montauk Stakes for two-year-olds was the feature at Brighton this afternoon. It promised a good contest, for such good youngsters as Injunction, Janeway, Eugenia Burch, Saltbaker and Hackensack were scheduled to face the starter. There were other races just as attractive, the fields being well filled with a good class of horses well matched.

These promised excellent speculation, and it is fields like these that bring crowds out of the heated city. The chance to make money will induce all humans to take any sort of journey.

The weather was cool by contrast with the city. The track was fast and all conditions favored the sport.

TWO ATTEMPTS AND ONE SUICIDE DUE TO THE HOT WAVE.

While the ferry-boat Shinnecock, of the South Ferry line, was making a trip to Brooklyn to-day a man climbed the rail, jumped overboard and was drowned. He was identified as Martin Brown, of No. 67 Columbia street, Brooklyn, by Mrs. Bridget Gaynor, of the same address, who was a passenger on the ferry-boat.

When Brown jumped into the river the boat was stopped and a life-preserver thrown to him. Although Brown undoubtedly saw the effort to save him he did not make any attempt to seize the preserver. He gradually sank beneath the waters.

Later Mrs. Gaynor said she was not sure that the man was Brown, but that he looked like Brown. He is a "long-shoreman" and has a wife and three children.

The heat is supposed to have affected the man's mind.

Attempts at suicide ascribed to the hot wave are:

Leola Kinsley, eighteen years old, of No. 32 West Eleventh street, who tried to kill herself on the corner of Sixth avenue and Fifteenth street, by taking carbolic acid, was removed to the New York Hospital.

Roberta Beasley, nineteen years old, of No. 9 Monroe street, who sought death at her residence by taking Paris green, was removed to Gouverneur Hospital.

Ellen Cohen, thirty-four years old, of No. 152 Mulgrave street, was found in the bathroom of her home this afternoon overcome by gas. She was removed to Gouverneur Hospital.

The dynamite was placed by James Blake, Leck Allen and James Murray. Prisoners in the jail.

Allen, Blake and Murray made a fierce fight for liberty, but the guards were too quick for them.
